Chapter 1 by Yoda117

On July 4, 2020 humans fought a war that ended in one big blast. Wars had been fought in the past, but with the technologically advanced weapons this war was one of a kind. Everyone feared the use of such weapons, but in the end the people with control over the weapons fell to corruption. The weapons showed no mercy women, children, and men all died in the greatest genocide of all time.

A group known as Atlantis had seen the use of such weapons coming and had turned an old mine into a underground city, the last hope of mankind. The great blast killed billions, but Atlantis was able to save just enough humans to keep the species alive. The underground city was named after the the organisation that had made it, Atlantis. The city had a perfect system of government. Everyone had their job and they would work that job until they got to the age of uselessness, a time when a person had worked enough and would be looked after until the end. Everything runs perfectly until a young man or woman failed pass a simple test.

This test, known as the placement test, helps the governing body put people in the right jobs to better the city as a whole. Everyone has to take the test when they turn 1 years old. This one test decides the job a person will work for the rest of their life. If anyone fails the test they are no longer fit to live in Atlantis and will be sent to the surface in the most human way possible.

A person that fails the test is forced into the "useless" category. They will be sent back to the surface of Earth. No one knows what happens on the surface, but it's their job to see what's up there and determine if it is safe, but in truth it's just a way to get rid of the "useless people".
